The Narcissus is one of our most beautiful spring-flowering bulbous plants, and thrives well in California. Some very desirable effects can be had by planting them in solid beds, and also by planting them among shrubbery and allowing them to become naturalized. They may be planted from the first of October to the middle of January, in any good garden soil, covering the bulbs to the depth of about 5 inches. The polyanthus varieties, of which the Chinese Lily is the best known, also succeed well in water.

TULIPS

For many years it was considered almost impossible to grow tulips successfully in Southern California, but of late years it has been demonstrated that the late flowering varieties can be grown here with the very best of results. A shady or partially shady situation is preferable, and they thrive best in a sandy soil, well enriched with plenty of rotten manure. The bulbs should be covered about five inches deep, and may be planted from October to February, though early planting is advisable. The Gesneriana Major is the large, late, scarlet tulip seen in many of the floral stores late in the spring and so greatly admired.

HYACINTHS

Hyacinths may be grown in the open ground, in pots, or in glasses. and can be planted from the beginning of October until the end of December.

For the open ground, plant in light rich soil, covering to the depth of 4 or 5 inches.

For pots, plant one in a 5-inch pot, pressing the earth down firmly and leaving one-third of the bulb exposed; then place the pots on the north side of a building or in a cellar and cover with a layer of sand, earth or leaf mould to the depth of about 8 inches; after 4 or 5 weeks unearth the pots and gradually humour to the light.

For glasses, fill the glass with water so as to nearly touch the base of the bulb; place in a cellar or dark place for a few weeks until the roots have grown half way to the bottom of the glass; the water should be changed frequently, care being taken not to injure the roots. A piece of charcoal placed in the water will help to keep it pure.
